

KLANICZAY TIBOR EMLÉKELŐADÁS-SOROZAT

TIBOR KLANICZAY MEMORIAL LECTURE SERIES

„This lecture will tell the story of the English Reformation, not as it appeared to ecclesiastical or political leaders, but as it appeared to the souls of English people. The soul, which before the Reformation was encased in a comprehensive set of rites and structures designed to carry it to salvation, was now stripped bare and stood alone before God. It was liberating, and it was frightening. The lecture will explore why, in England’s peculiar Reformation, the soul’s drama played out in a different way from all other Protestant countries. When we consider the emotional turmoil to which English Protestant souls were exposed, we can see how this lay the foundation for Pietism and Evangelicalism of later centuries – and also for the Deism and scepticism of the Radical Enlightenment.”
